PACKAGING SCIENCE MINOR

Packaging science is an excellent area of concentration for students in engineering science and business-related disciplines. All companies that produce physical products deal with packaging. Most companies employ teams of packaging professionals from a variety of backgrounds and disciplines. Packaging plays a key role in competitive advantage in the marketplace, and packaging is always changing and improving.

About this Program

- College: Agricultural and Life Sciences
- Credits: 15, graded courses completed with minimum grades of C
- Contact: Frazier Rogers Hall