

URBAN AND REGIONAL PLANNING MINOR

Society's demands on the natural environment continue to increase as communities grow to meet population demands. Planning addresses the interface between the social, environmental and economic dimensions of communities and regions. Never before has the need to shape visions and guide community outcomes been greater.

The Urban and Regional Planning minor introduces the challenging and vital aspects of creating, improving, and sustaining communities and regions.

Curriculum

- Combination Degrees
- Urban and Regional Planning Minor

Application should be made early so that guidance can be given for course selection and special studies parameters. Students must have a C+ GPA for admission to the minor and they must maintain a C+ GPA in all coursework for the minor. The only S/U course accepted is URP 4942.

The minor does not provide professional certification.

It is each student's responsibility to declare the minor through their major degree department or college and to obtain the required signatures from their department and URP.

Study Abroad/Off-Campus Studies

Students need approval before signing up for study abroad or off-campus studies for inclusion in the URP minor. Credits will not be accepted after a student has started study abroad or off-campus studies. Eligible programs should be offered by UF's International Center or the College of Design, Construction and Planning. URP's undergraduate coordinator must determine eligibility of study abroad or off-campus coursework prior to taking the course. Accepted credits may vary from three to six, depending on the intensity and appropriateness of the selected program.
